Excerpt of pertinent information :

P. 12 The situation of the group (Romanian politicians) changed at the end of 1946, when the leading Romanian politicians, RADESCU, NICULESCU-BOZESTI, FARGAS-ANU, Sabini MANOILA and GILEZAN, arrived from Rumania by various routes. Wherever they were able to collaborate among themselves they represented a strong political group, regardless of party differences. The arrival of King MICHAEL strengthened even more the situation of this group, because Prime Minister RADESCU, as well as NICULESCU-BOZESTI, is very well-connected with the King. The relations between the two groups were worsened during 1947, and even though the political differences were immaterial. The two groups have finally recognized MICHAEL as sovereign, however, and have agreed that the political question will be directed by General RADESCU. . .

After one year of sterile negotiations, MICHAEL conducted an arbitration. Thus, on May 10, 1949. . . the Rumanian National Committee, of 10 members nominated by the King, came into existence. . . Composition of the party is as follows: 1. General Nicolae RADESCU, Chairman. Former Prime Minister, non-party. . .

P. 13—The National Rumanian Committee is one of the broadest based emigre groups among intermarium countries. . . but the Committee's strength is not sufficient as regards its future political activity. . . Moreover, General RADESCU is an old man, and has been appointed Foreign Minister. . .

This is all the pertinent information on subject in this document.
